Coronet, Charger, 1968-1970. The intermediates abandoned the squared-off look in favor of body curves for 1968-1970, but maintained the same dimensions. The Charger remained a fastback coupe, the Super Bee was a stripped coupe, the R/T a luxury coupe or convertible, all three had high performance engines and options standard or optional. Standard models far outsold the high performance cars, but their image was important for the sales of the standard cars during this period.
